

Community Superheroes

Help your child celebrate National Superhero Day on April 28th by recognizing superheroes in your own community. Talk to your child about superheroes they may know about in books or movies. Explain that they are called superheroes because they have special powers that they use to help other people. Then, tell your child that there are superheroes in their own community who have special powers and use them to help people! Doctors, nurses, firefighters, police officers, and more! Help your child make some thank you cards to deliver to the superheroes who help keep them safe and healthy every day!
