

Be Sure to Say Thank You

In this rhyming book, your child will be reminded when they should say thank you and why it is so important! If your child is too young to actually say the words “thank you” then teaching them sign language is a good way to give them a voice. All you need to do is hold your hand up, fingers close together, with your palm facing your chin. Then, simply put your fingertips up to your chin and move them out forward. It’s almost like blowing a kiss but your hands go to your chin rather than your lips. Every time you say thank you, make this sign with your hands and pretty soon, your child will do the same!
