

Thankful Placemats

Place large sheets of construction paper, glue or glue sticks, magazines, and family pictures on a table. Ask your child to tear or cut out pictures from the magazines of things they like and are thankful for, such as foods, games, animals, toys, etc. Then, let them go through family photos and pick out the ones they liked the most! Tell your child to glue the pictures and photographs on the construction paper, allowing pictures/photos to overlap each other. The goal is to fill the entire construction paper with images and pictures of things and people they are thankful for. Once the paper is complete, you will need a roll of contact paper to cover the construction paper and secure it so it can be cleaned off in case any food or liquid drops on the placemat. Your child has a placemat to put under their plate when eating a meal. Your child can look at their placemat when eating and be reminded of everything they are thankful for!
