

"Scratch & Sniff Name Cards" with Jell-o.

This is how we made them: (Upper grade students can make these for lower grade buddies.)

In a small group, while the students were coloring the cover of their Sensational Adventure books, I wrote each child's name with white glue on a lined card. As I wrote each letter, I talked about the straight lines and the curved lines each letter had.

Then, the 1st child got to choose a flavor a Jell-o to sprinkle on the glue.

Since the Jell-o doesn't always look like the color it will turn, I placed a piece of colored construction paper below each cup.

After the student sprinkles the Jell-o, I turn the card over to reveal the brightly colored name.

When they are dry (the next day), I let the students come up to "Scratch & Sniff" their name. They can FEEL it, SMELL it, HEAR it, and SEE it.

We just don't taste it. :)

I tape these to the door, low enough so they can Scratch & Sniff their name or their friend's name too.
